Allied Forces About Ready To Open Battle On Germany

Vimy Ridge Is Easily Captured By Allied Troops

Whirlwind Advance Of Allied Forces May Reach Reich By Nightfall

ROCKET COAST IS NEARLY SEALED OFF

By CHARLES A. SMITH
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, Sept. 2.—Allied troops surging toward the German frontier in a whirlwind advance which threatened to reach the Reich by nightfall over-ran another famous battleground of World War One days today—the once blood-soaked terrain of Vimy Ridge.

The historic ridge was scooped up in the course of a multi-pronged offensive which saw British patrols stab into Lens, 10 miles north of Arras, and Pernes, below the communications hub of Bethune. These sweeps virtually completed the sealing off of the rocket bomb coast in the Pas De Calais area of northern France.

Nazi radio reports said the Doughboys' armor had reached Thionville, 10 miles from the tip of the German boundary where it joins that of Luxembourg.

Official spokesmen at Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters announced that the advance rolled beyond Vimy Ridge into and through the village of Chamigneul.

Nearing Abbeville

The British advance now is in the shape of a wide arrowhead based on Doullons and pointing Douai and Arras. Near the rail city of Abbeville, key to large areas of the V-1 coast, the Canadians reached a stream skirting the town, but no claim of the hub's capture was made.

Spokesmen announced, however, that the Canadians are pushing steadily along the French coast, clearing up the German resistance

Superior Allied Generalship Seen In Rout Of Nazis

By CAPTAIN JOHN H. CRAIGE

With Allies armies pouring across France like a flood from a mountain torrent after a dam has collapsed, it is evident that the battle of France is all over but the mopping-up, and that United Nations forces are in the final stages of a campaign that will go down among the most brilliant in history.

Even the lightning thrusts of Hitler's Wehrmacht of the war's early days, when the German Stuka-Panzer team was taking the world by surprise, show nothing to equal the sound planning and brilliant execution that have marked the American-British offensive of the past month.

Unquestionably superior equipment and manpower played a part in American-British successes, but beyond and above them it is also evident that superior Allied generalship has been responsible for the manner in which German plans that seemed sound have been smashed by daring strokes at just the right spots and veteran German

American And French Forces Move Up Rhone

Limited Gains Are Scored South Of Lyon—Rains Hamper Advance

OVER 55,000 NAZI PRISONERS TAKEN

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

ROME, Sept. 2.—Hampered by late summer rains which drenched the battlefields north of the Riviera, American and French troops bored slowly up the Rhone River valley south of Lyon today, scoring new but limited gains in a drive destined to link up with victorious Allied forces in northern France.

(The Brazzaville radio reported that American troops which crossed the Italian border at Ventimiglia had pushed twelve miles inside Italy.)

Northwest of Grenoble, the Americans passed Voiron and occupied Contes, which lies eight miles northeast of Nice. French forces advancing west of the Rhone passed San Greve and Charmes.

Over 55,000 Prisoners

Headquarters of Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson announced that the toll of German prisoners since southern France was invaded on Aug 15 now totals 55,000. Of this huge number, French forces alone took some 35,000, the bulk in Marseille and Toulon, the two great ports and naval bases now firmly in Allied hands.

Allied naval vessels continued to pour an unceasing stream of sup-

State Completes Mailing Of Ballots

Political Leaders Now Guessing At Number Which Will Be Returned Before Nov. 7

HARRISBURG, Sept. 2.—(INS)—The second phase of Pennsylvania's liberal soldier vote plan was completed today as county election bureaus completed mailing approximately 550,000 ballots to service men and women eligible to vote in the general election November 7.

Indicative of interest in the election, state election bureau officials reported, about 180,000 applications were received for federal ballots compared with 4300 requests four year ago.

While only 688 servicemen returned ballots in 1940, some political leaders have estimated as high as 75 per cent of the ballots will be returned while others believe only one-third of the eligible service vote will respond. The first phase of the huge program was the house-to-house canvass for names.

Since Pennsylvania rejected the federal ballot in favor of a state law, service men and women need not make application for secret ballots.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 2.—(INS)—Pittsburgh's French colony today paid tribute to United Nations soldiers who freed Paris.

State Department Makes Charges

Declares Clerk In U. S. Embassy Showed Shocking Disregard Of Obligation To U. S.

By ARTHUR F. HERMANN
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—The State department officially charged today that Tyler Kent, a clerk in the U. S. Embassy in London, now serving a seven year prison sentence," displayed a shocking disregard for decency and honor so far as his obligations toward the United states are concerned."

Kent was convicted in 1940 along with an alleged pro-Nazi accomplice for having delivered confidential information to German agents "prejudicial to the safety or interests of Great Britain."

The State department charged that Kent had more than 1,500 confidential embassy papers as well as specially made keys in his possession when arrested. The department said he had no right to have these papers and keys in his private possession. For this he was dismissed from embassy service and his trial in British courts followed.

The department's announcement today said it will be decided whether the United States will bring charges against him when he is released from the British jail.

The embassy clerk, a resident of Washington and the son of a diplomat, was sentenced to jail in 1940. Since that time Congress demanded that all the facts surrounding his imprisonment be made public.

Vallee, saying that he had finally come to his senses, promised that he would be "nothing but the devoted husband from now on."

For her part, Miss Greer said: "Rudy is the one for me. Our marriage will last forever."

MOSCOW, Sept. 2.—Massive Soviet forces rolled through Romania almost without opposition today after their liberation of the key Danube port of Giurgiu while other Red army units before Warsaw broke into the outskirts of the beleaguered capital and captured a strategic high position northeast of the industrial suburb of Praga.

The capture of Giurgiu, an important train-ferry point and terminus of the pipe line from the Ploesti oil fields, in a 35-mile drive southwest of liberated Bucharest, cleared the Germans from the north bank of the Danube for almost 200 miles.

THREE OTHERS ARE ALSO BADLY HURT

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Sept. 2.—(INS)—Three soldiers were killed and three others seriously injured today when their automobile left the highway and struck a tree on the Youngstown-Hubbard road near Youngstown.

State highway patrolmen said the soldiers' car weaved across the road, sideswiped a car driven by Alex Hefton, 49, of Hubbard, hit a ditch and crashed into the tree.

The dead were identified as First Lt. Robert A. Sheppard, Pvt. Donald N. Liddick and Robert J. Farrington, 47, of Beaver Falls, Pa. Homes of either Lt. Sheppard or Pvt. Liddick were unknown immediately.

THOUSANDS POUR THROUGH BREACH

By MICHAEL CHINIGO
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

ROME, Sept. 2.—The vaunted Nazi Gothic line across Italy has been breached by the British Eighth Army for a distance of 20 miles inland from the Adriatic coast while the American Fifth Army smashed against the line in a new big-scale offensive between Pisa and Florence.

Thousands of Polish, Canadian and British Indian troops of the Eighth were pouring through the breach early today and had advanced for distances up to four miles through the heavy concrete and steel fortresses built by the Nazis to protect the northern plains of Italy.

HOW WAR RAGES ON OLD FIELDS

As the allied stab into Sedan moves through Chateau Thierry, Soissons, Reims and Vitry, veterans of World War I grow reminiscent as their sons go over the very ground on which they fought. The battle line patterns of 1918 and of today have many parallels, as a glance at the map will show. However, this time the Allies are pledged to batter beyond the borders. (International)

Collapse Of Germany Within Next 90 Days Now Believed Likely

By KINGSBURY SMITH
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—Collapse of Germany within the next 90 days was foreseen in high official circles in Washington today. Officials who are not given to rash predictions believe there is now a strong possibility that the military might of Nazi Germany will be crushed within that time.

This belief is based on the latest reports from the American military commanders in France, the swiftness of the Soviet advances on the eastern front and knowledge of conditions that prevail within Germany.

Decisive Military Defeat

The collapse of Germany, however, is expected to come through decisive military defeat on the battlefields rather than through surrender of the country.

Little hope is held that the Nazi leadership will accept the Allied unconditional surrender terms, or permit the generals to do so for the country as a whole.

German army corps commanders are expected to surrender as their forces are smashed, but Adolf Hitler and the Nazi leaders are considered likely to fight on nutil they are killed or forced to flee. If the old-guard militiary leaders of the German army could surrender the country, it is believed they would do so at once in order to save man-

Soldier Once Reported Dead Reaches Home

Pfc. James H. Flaugher greatly surprised his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Flaugher of 730 East Washington street when he walked into his home on Friday on 30 days convalescing furlough.

The War department at Washington, D. C., reported on June 22 that Pfc. Flaugher had died of wounds in battle in Italy on May 28. Further report from the department on June 27, regretting the previous report, and stating that Pfc. Flaugher was making normal improvement.

Pfc. Flaugher was confined to a hospital in Italy for two months, and landed in New York August 3, and has been in England General hospital, Atlantic City, until August 31, where he will return at the conclusion of his furlough.

He was in action in the battle for Cassino, and the landing at Anzio beach. He was wounded in January and again in May, within 16 miles of Rome, with a bullet through the bone of the upper part of his left arm. His arm is still in a cast.

Pfc. Flaugher has received the Purple Heart decoration. He states that he is making good progress.

He enlisted in the Infantry Service 19 months ago, and was overseas 11 months. He is 19 years of age.

Washington Roundup

(International News Service)

High official circles in Washington believe today that the collapse of Germany will come within the next 90 days. Defeat of the Nazis, however, is expected to come thru losses on the battlefields and not by accepting the allies unconditional surrender terms.

On the domestic scene, meanwhile, gradual federal seizure of some 70 key coal mines appears inescapable. The foremen's union of the United Mine Workers is making it plain that supervisory employes will work for the government but not for the coal operators without a contract.

Congress is closing for the Labor Day week-end but several committees are meeting today. These include the house-senate conference committee attempting to reach agreement on postwar demobilization legislation. Strong sentiment appears to be developing for a federal program of financial aid to stranded war workers and their families when the war ends.

From the senate today comes a renewed charge by Sen. Chandler (D) Ky., that the British government forced the recall of American Ambassador William Phillips, while in the house, Rep. Smith (R) Wis., charges the war department with "hedging" on a promised furlough for servicemen with two years service in the southwest Pacific.

Two Decisive Tests Will Show Nazi Strength

Allied Forces Approaching Border Of Germany In Several Sectors

ALLIED STRATEGY IS NOT REVEALED

By J. C. OESTREICHER
(I. N. S. Foreign Editor)

The hour approached rapidly today for two decisive tests that will determine just how long Nazi Germany can hold out against unconditional surrender—the only basis upon which the war Adolf Hitler started five years ago can be brought to an end.

One will demonstrate the actual strength of Hitler's vaunted Siegfried line.

The other will disclose the vigor and determination with which the Nazis fight on invaded soil of their own homeland.

Allied troops sweeping forward on a vast 250-mile arc pounded steadily toward the frontiers of Belgium and of Germany. One American armored column was reported only fourteen miles from the point where the border of the Reich joins with that of Luxembourg. Another was within artillery range of Metz. British troops swept beyond recaptured Arras along the southern fringe of the robot bomb coast toward Belgium and that little country's frontier as well as the border of Germany seemed certain to be reached by nightfall.

Strategy Not Known

No one could predict whether the grand strategy of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower calls for a frontal assault against the most heavily fortified area of the Siegfried line in the region of Mainz or whether looping drives through Belgium and a possible over-water thrust into Holland will be utilized instead.

Gen. Eisenhower gave a clear intimation that the Siegfried line holds no terrors for the Allies when he said that no fortified defenses are better than the men defending

Some of the former captives sported German helmets and wore Russian uniforms. Others were attired in colorful shirts and trousers, wore fancy belts and carried wicked looking knives. Many had grown beards.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—(INS)—Germany has launched a new weapon against England—detachable aircraft, the British Air Ministry announced today.

An official statement said that two enemy aircraft, believed to be the "lower component" of a composite plane, went into action against England last night. The craft caused little damage and no casualties.

Experts had prophesied the Germans would use such a weapon as flying-bomb bases became untenable.

Vets Of 332nd Assemble Here

Annual Reunion Of Soldiers Of Division In First World War Meet

MEN SERVED IN ITALY IN 1918

The Lion of St. Marks is roaring today. Veterans of the American forces who served in Italy in World War 1, the 332nd Infantry began arriving in New Castle early today for the 23rd annual reunion of the association and today and tomorrow The Castleton hotel will be filled with the veterans of the only American regiment to be awarded a shoulder marking by a foreign government, the Lion of St. Marks awarded by the Italian government.

Registration was under way this morning and is continuing this afternoon. At one o'clock the Dug Out opens in the Coral room of The Castleton and reminisences of the Piave and Tagliamento rivers, of Venice and Florence and Genoa will be relived. Some of the men got up into Montenegro before they returned home, and following armistice the men visited all parts of Italy and the Balkan countries. Another distinction marks the 332nd the regiment celebrated the armistice five days before November 11, due to the Austrians capitulating to the Italians before the Germans surrendered to the Allies.

Dinner At 6:30 P. M.

The regimental dinner will be served tonight at 6:30 o'clock in The Castleton ballroom, with Rev. Thomas J. Jones delivering the invocation. The president of the association Joseph J. O'Leary will open the program with Edward D. Pritchard as master of ceremonies. Mayor John F. Haven will make the address of welcome and the guest speaker will be Arthur R. Heizman, former company commander of the 47th company, 20th Engineers and presently a regional field director for the United States treasury. A floor show will follow the program.

On Sunday morning at ten o'clock a memorial and business meeting will be held in The Castleton and Rev. Thomas J. Jones, pastor of the First Congregational church will deliver the address of the day. Miss Anna Mann will be the soloist of the day.

Officers will be elected on Sunday morning. The present officers are Joseph F. O'Leary, president, Jack Reedy first vice president, Edward D. Pritchard second vice president, Roy F. Preston, treasurer, and Frank C. Summers, secretary.

The reunion committees are as follows: registration, Harry A. Donaldson; entertainment, Frank C. Summers; Dugout, Frank C. Summers; memorial, Edward D. Pritchard; reception, Joseph F. O'Leary, banquent, Frank C. Summers; program, Edward D. Pritchard, and publicity, Leon A. Drumm. Ladies welfare, Mrs. Edward D. Pritchard, chairman; Mrs. Joseph F. O'Leary, vice chairman, Mrs. Harry A. Donaldson.

It's a great gang, the 332nd. Fight or frolic, it was always the same, they did the job thoroughly. They're doing the job of the reunion thoroughly today, albeit some of the lads who made whoopee in Milan back in 1918 are dignified gray haired gentlemen now with sons and nephews overseas taking the places they filled back in the first World war.

as they go. South of the Somme as far west as Dieppe now is virtually cleared, with only Le Havre remaining as an island of resistance where the Nazis are attempting to carry out demolitions as the Allies advance.

Fontaine Le Dun, eight miles southeast of Valerie, was reached, spokesmen announced, adding tersely that there are "no Germans" left south of the Seine.

Unofficial dispatches said the British troops reaching Lens have sent forward elements 10 or 12 miles beyond that city, apparently almost into Lille which lies 15 miles north of Lens.

14 Miles From Germany

The Nazi radio said that American troops pushing toward Luxembourg are within 14 miles of the German frontier and unofficial observers predicted that by nightfall advance Doughboy units may be within the Reich.

A DNB broadcast from Berlin quoted a Wilhelmstrasse spokesman as saying that American tanks have pushed to Longwy and Thionville. The latter town is only 14 miles from the point where Luxembourg's frontier joins that of Germany.

Longwy, a close to the border point which figured prominently in the so-called "phony war" days of 1940, is 23 miles northfest of Thionville and only seven miles southwest of the city of Luxembourg, capital of the Duchy.

The Allies swept forward along a broken front extending in a giant arc of 250 miles from a point north of Dieppe to Commercy.

Beyond Verdun

American columns dashing beyond liberated Verdun were officially reported to be within 50 miles of the Reich but actually were believed to be many miles nearer by the time reports of their advances were confirmed.

The British and Canadian forces racing up the channel coast were last reported within 20 miles of the Belgian border and already may have crossed that frontier.

Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's Third U. S. Army Forces swept beyond liberated St. Mihiel and Verdun where they crossed the Meuse River at two points and jammed their way through the historic Argonne Forest in the areas of Boulny, Verennes and Clermont.

Every indication today was that the Germans are pulling out of France at all points with all the speed possible and are even using a greater number of slow horse-drawn vehicles in their desperate attempt to get men and materials behind the temporary safety of the Siegfreid line.

In their scramble to get out of France, there is little or no evidence that the Germans have any prepared defenses short of the Reich frontier save at the port of La Havre.

Large pockets of Germans have been left behind in the rapid advances of the British, Canadians and Americans and the mopping up operations now are in progress.

As German resistance wilted, Arras, Dieppe, Verdun and St. Mihiel were engulfed with only minor opposition and one report, as yet unconfirmed by headquarters, said the Americans had crashed across the Belgian frontier where an estimated million members of the underground are awaiting anxiously the opportunity to join in the battle for the liberation of their country.

The communique from supreme headquarters today confirmed previous field reports that Dieppe, Arras and Verdun had been completely liberated.

Canadians Avenge Disaster

Canadian forces who avenged their disasterous invasion rehearsal at Dieppe with the capture of that city, raced on against light opposition for 16 miles and captured Le Treport.

British forces seized the town of Cambalgnul, eight miles north of Arras and took Nouex to the north of Lens.

Reuter's reported that the British forces have cut all of the main roads between Pernes and Lens and now hold high ground between Lens and Douai.

Advanced armored units in this area now are less than 20 miles from the Belgian frontier.

British headquarters also reported the capture of some 5,000 prisoners in the past 48 hours.

(A Reuter's report said the Canadians had reached the historic Somme river during the night and had cleared the triangle from its mouth to Abbeville and Le Treport of all enemy opposition. Three bridges at Abbeville were captured and Canadian armored units are poised there now for a dash across the stream.

Bolbec Overrun

Another British column thrust to the Somme southeast of Abbeville and also seized the town of Doullens.

Bolbec was overrun, as was Fauville-En-Coux and the Canadians also jammed their way into the rail town of Yvetot which cut the line running from Le Havre.

Only light opposition was encountered by the British northeast of Beauvais where they have captured Coullemelle and Viellers Tournelle some six miles west of Mont Didier.

North of St. Dizier, the hard hitting columns of the third U. S. army reached a point along the Rhine-Marne canal and continued their advance through the region of Joinville.

Another Yank column smashed its way through Montcoronet, north of the Aisne river and armored spearheads were last reported 18 miles northeast of Laon.

Shortly after the first Allied patrols fought their way into Foret-designy, the place was reported firmly in their hands and cleared of the enemy.

Rethel, less than 27 miles from the frontier of the Duchy of Luxembourg, also was entered by the Americans.

Only at the town of Compeigne were the Allies reported to be meeting with determined Nazi resistance and early today there still was no confirmation that the Nazi garrison there had withdrawn.

Arras and Abbeville fell into British hands when their forces sped 37 miles northeast of Amiens. They now are reported to be stabbing their way toward the important junction of Lille.

RUSSIAN FORCES SEEKING JUNCTION WITH TITO'S MEN

ing rapidly toward a junction with the fighting Partisans of Marshal Joseph Tito In Yugoslavia.

This union threatens to isolate hundreds of thousands of German forces in Greece, Albania and the Aegean islands.

One great Russian column stabbing westward from Bucharest along the Bulgar-Romanian border is approaching the iron gate at Turnu Severin.

(A Reuter's dispatch from Cairo said no German resistance was in sight as the Russians streamed westward along the Danube and the London radio broadcast reports of a sweeping drive along the Danube toward Austria and Yugoslavia. CBS recorded the broadcast.)

Can't Defend Austria

(Radio Atlantic, the secret German language station, said in a broadcast heard by NBC that Vienna officials have admitted Austria can not be defended against the rapidly approaching Soviet war machine.)

The Soviet communique early today disclosed that the drive beyond the liberated Black sea port of Constanta was continuing unabated and that several inhabited localities had been seized. The Russians already have reached the Bulgar frontiers in this region and apparently have joined in the drive westward along the Danube.

In the huge bag of liberated communities reported in the Moscow communique today, 60 were seized in advances south and west of the blazing Ploesti oil fields and 100 others were taken in the region south and southwest of Bucharest.

Liberation Nearly Complete

(An announcement from general staff headquarters of the Romanian army said the liberation of their nation now was virtually complete and that the army was now "ready for new tasks" meaning presumably the job of retaking Transylvania from Hungary.)

(The London radio, heard by CBS, said that Romanian forces had begun operations in Transylvania which was handed to Hungary by the Nazis in 1940 by the Vienna award.)

In addition to Giurgiu, the Russians also have liberated the strategic railway town of Calarasi which is some 63 miles due west of Constanta.

The supplementary Moscow communique said early today that at least two German companies had been eliminated in the fighting before Warsaw and that a large bag of prisoners and huge quantities of war materials had been captured.

armies of nearly 1,000,000 men have been broken and routed in an ultra-modern lightning war that stands unequalled in military annals.

Patton's Army Big Factor

Outstanding hero of the drama that has been played out on the hills and plains of France has been Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's 3rd American army. General Patton's tanks have been the hammer at the end of a long American arm, that has swung in a wide arc, smashing and demolishing key bastions to the flank and rear of the Nazi fighting front, cutting rail and highway supply lines, until the Nazi high command, facing isolation on the channel's bomb-coast, realized the jig was up and began a frantic retreat that has developed into an apparently complete route.

By the lightening thrusts of his armored columns to Le Mans and Tours, then up the Loire valley to Blois and Orleans, Gen. Patton rendered the Nazi defense of Paris impossible. That seemed a great accomplishment, but the American general did not rest on his laurels. Shortly thereafter his galloping tank columns were heard from in the vicinity of Rheims, driving a wedge across all German communications between Paris and the old German frontier on the Rhine.

Battle Of Germany Now

With Patton at Rheims, the only German routes of supply or escape that remained open lay to the north through Belgium and Holland, and it became evident on the chessboard of war that the powerful Nazi 15th Army on the bomb-coast would have to be withdrawn with the utmost speed to prevent its annihilation.

With the battle of France won, next phase of the war is the battle of Germany. Unquestionably Gen. Patton's armored columns, following the retreating enemy, hope to strike from Metz across Luxembourg along the old invasion road to Coblenz and the Rhine. The Nazis have powerful defenses there. Whether or not they will be able to rally and fight is the question that will mold the history of the immediate future.

them. The Siegfried line may prove the same sort of hollow fraud as the $60,000,000 fortifications built by Andre Maginot.

So far as is known, the Siegfried line was built with an eye to all contingencies. But it is certain that with his fifth column knowledge of French treason and unpreparedness and in his firm conviction that Britain would never fight for France, Hitler in the early days never seriously envisaged an invasion of Germany.

May Have Extended Line

During the five years that war has raged, Hitler may have found time, men and materials to extend the Siegfried line to the sea, but this appears doubtful and its strongest point is believed to be in the vicinity of Mainz, northeast of Saabrucken and deep inside the German frontier.

Behind Mainz and the other keypoints of the westwall, the Germans are supposed to have installed defenses in a depth of from 30 to 40 miles, the theory being that even if German soil is entered, invaders can be contained and annihilated in No Man's Land.

It is obvious, however, that no unbroken line of fortification such as the Chinese wall has been built in Germany and the great gaps torn in modern German defenses along the channel coast on D-day and soon afterward stand as eloquent proof that Allied ingenuity and striking power will be more than a match for Hitler's static defenses.

power and prevent the further destruction of German cities and towns.

Nazis Hold On

However, the Nazis will not let them do so. Therefore, it is thought the American, British and Soviet armies will have to fight their way into Germany proper and occupy a considerable part of the country before organized resistance ends.

There is a strong belief that the Allied armies will be in military control of Germany within the next three months. The optimists in Washington predict Germany's downfall by the middle of October. The more conservative elements in the government foresee the end by December 1.

It is considered likely, however, that it will take several months after the defeat of Germany to complete mopping-up operations within the country. The possibility is seen that Himmler's home guard of SS troops and other Nazi fanatics will break up into guerrilla bands that will continue to fight on in the forests and mountains of Germany until they are wiped out.

DRY CLEAN AND Revitalize FOR LONGER WEAR

What "Revitalizing" Does

1. REVITALIZING puts back the body and texture which the fabric had when new.
2. The garment not only has the look and feel of newness, but it also holds its shape and smartness as long as a new garment.
3. REVITALIZING makes dry cleaning last longer, which costs less.

NAZI GOTHIC LINE ACROSS ITALY IS NOW PENETRATED

bined power offensive sweeping across almost all of the Italian peninsula got under way August 26 after elaborate preparations conducted in the greatest of secrecy.

The defending Nazis drew heavily on their dwindling reserves in a desperate attempt to block the smashing advance of the Eighth Army armored and infantry forces driving northward from the Foglia river.

Hitler obviously is keeping the forces of Marshal Albert Von Kesselring in Italy as a suicide gesture toward his broken ally, Mussolini.

The American Seventh Army driving eastward and south from France, whose advance into the Italian Riviera and reached a depth of 12 miles, according to one report, threatened to turn the plains of northern Italy into a vast trap for the German forces there.

Nazis Fight Desperately

It was reported by observers that the Germans are making a desperate attempt to block the breach of the Gothic line because their only alternatives is to fall back on the defenses along the Po River, constricting the area in which they may have to fight both on their front and rear.

The Fifth Army was launching its way into the Gothic line between Pisa and Florence with armor and infantry along a front which has been quiet for weeks.

Advanced columns already have speared their way across the Arno River at several points in a flanking movement which may force the Nazis to abandon historic Piza without a battle.

In spite of the secrecy with which the new offensive was prepared, there have been persistent reports from German sources in recent days that an all-out attack against the Gothic line was being prepared by the Allies.

Along the eastern end of the line toward the Adriatic, the Germans have been retiring into the deep line of fortifications in movements which offered little serious opposition to the Allied forces.

Front lines reports revealed that the Polish columns were engaged in heavy fighting with Nazi paratroopers at Pesaro along the railway line north of the Foglia river.

Farther to the west in the Foglia bridgehead at Monteccio area the Eighth Army columns were meeting with savage Nazi resistance and bitter opposition also was encountered in Mount Gridolfo and Mount Calvo.

However the Eighth Army was reported knocking down this determined resistance all along the front for further substantial gains.

Coordinated with the drive into Italy from the French Riviera, the new combined offensive against the Gothic line threatens the collapse of the entire Nazi "underbelly" in Europe, particularly with the German organization in the Balkans falling apart.

Spearheading the American drive northward were Negro troops of the 92nd Infantry division. Beating down stiff enemy resistance, these Negro forces crossed the river and fought their way into the strategic Pisano hills.

Japanese-American soldiers, principally from Hawaii, occupied the southeast slopes of Pisano.

In their "softening up" operations, the American air force bombed the Gothic line from one end to another Friday, dropping more than 500 tons of high explosives on German fortifications.

The new Allied Balkan air force, composed principally of veterans of the air battle over England in 1940, continued their slashing attacks at Nazi communications between Italy and the Balkans.

OVER 1,000 ALLIED AIRMEN IN ROME AFTER LIBERATION

High ranking officers, surprised bystanders, war correspondents and photographers gave the returning flyers an enthusiastic welcome.

Many of the aviators happily reported how they soon will get to go home, and all of them told matter-of-factly their interesting experiences.

"I can't express how glad I am to be free again," said Second Lieut. Robert Buckwalter, Pasadena, Calif., who was navigator aboard a B-17 that went down over the Ploesti oil fields last May.

Most of the fliers agreed that the food they were given and their living conditions were not as bad as they had expected.

One of the principal complaints, according to First Lieut. Arvin Lerber, Buffalo, N. Y., was that "most of us suffered from vermin—and the delousing process!"

Lerber, a bombardier who went down in April at Ploesti, chuckled: "The delousing process the Romanians put us through didn't seem to do us much good!"

The land area of all the West Indies islands is about 100,000 square miles.

plies and reinforcements into the Riviera coast, while auxiliary units completed the mopping up of small islands of Marseille where minor German forces whom the enemy could not evacuate were bypassed in the initial operations.

Latest information placed two columns of Lieut. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's United States Seventh Army within 45 miles of Lyon, France's Third city. One force is pressing the retreating Germans up the Rhone valley from the south beyond Tournon, 10 miles north of Valence.

Germans Attempt Cover

The other is advancing from Grenoble in the Dauphine Alps.

Reports to Rome indicated the Germans were attempting to establish "covering positions" to protect the continuing retreat to the German frontier.

Despite the rains, Allied air activity continued in support of the ground troops. Strong forces of heavy bombers attacked railway communications in the Balkans hitting four railway bridges and four railyards in Hungary and Yugoslavia, while other formations attacked the airdrome at Nis and a bridge in the Po Valley.

Shipping off the west coast of Italy and in the Adriatic also were attacked. The Mediterranean air force flew a total of approximately 1,900 sorties throughout yesterday.

For her marriage, the bride was attractive in a street length gown of jersey in sea gull gray. Her accessories were carried out in black and she wore a shoulder corsage of white orchids.

As her only attendant, Miss Gertrude Pearson Matthews, sister of the groom, wore a magenta crepe street length dress, and her accompaniments were also in black, complimented with a shoulder cluster of orchids.

Hitler's Oil Troubles

The German war machine, battered and riddled from all sides, is running out of oil, without which its remaining military usefulness will be gone. Russian forces in Romania not only are cutting into disorganized Nazi troops with the methodical sweep of a giant scythe, but are wresting from Hitler the great stretches of oil territory that formerly supplied him with the means to set his mechanized forces running over Europe. It has been estimated that Romanian oil supplied fully a third of the Germans' military fuel need.

Now the Russians are taking all these oil regions over, with the largest Romanian oil center—Ploesti—already in their grasp. Hitler left numerous Nazi divisions in this area in a futile attempt to hold territory in the face of overwhelming odds. These luckless defenders of the Nazi standard are being systematically eliminated by Romanian and Russian forces, as the Romanian oil fields are added to the vista of Hitler's lost horizons. At this stage of the Nazi debacle in Romania, Hitler's military policy of retaining sizable reserves in that area has proved a despairing gesture of wildest extravagance.

In this connection, special interest attaches to the joint report of the American and British air forces that the production of finished oil products for Germany, both gasoline and lubricants, has been reduced by an estimated 49 per cent by Allied air bombardments during May, June and July, in Germany and in her satellite countries. This partly explains why Hitler found such extremes of fuel rationing necessary that German troops in France had to fight practically without air cover.

And now, with the Romanian oil supplies entirely cut off, regardless of efforts to sustain German synthetic oil production under bombardment, both the mechanized wehrmacht and what remains of the luftwaffe eventually must grind down to a dead stop.

Keep Those Supplies Flowing

General Eisenhower's official report of more than 400,000 casualties inflicted on the Germans in northern France since D-Day brings home to us the tremendous might of the Allies' military machine.

In the short space of less than three months we have eliminated 20 enemy divisions, or their equivalent, visited heavy losses on a dozen others and marooned three whole divisions on the Brittany peninsula.

Obviously this series of remarkable victories in record time could not have been achieved without heavy cost in the material resources of the Allies and, unfortunately, in the loss of precious lives.

The battle of France has been won, but we have yet to fight the battle of Germany. So there is another side to the glowing picture, and it is forcefully presented by General Eisenhower in his accompanying message to General Somervell, head of the Army Service Forces, to keep the weapons and ammunition flowing across the Atlantic.

We have lost 3000 airplanes and hundreds of tanks and are expending 150,000 tons of ammunition a month. The work of our home front is cut out for it. If we fail, our fight will fail. It must not and will not fail.

Preparing For Knockout

The heavy bombing raids against Japanese targets in recent days, including some of the heaviest sustained air attacks yet conducted simultaneously on a wide range of Japanese strongpoints in the Nimitz-MacArthur theaters of war, indicate the stepped-up activity in the Pacific area as a corollary of the rapid progress of the war in Europe.

The leaders of Allied strategy in the Pacific are getting into position to throw against Japan as soon as possible whatever air and naval forces (and perhaps some land troops) may be released when the war against Germany is won.

Everywhere in the Southwest Pacific large scale preparations for this purpose are in progress. These preparations are termed amazing considering present European operation, by one correspondent. The Allied commanders in the Pacific are seeking to utilize forces from the European area when the war against Germany ends without having to give time and effort to preliminary blows.

While the preparations of the Pacific commanders envelop the strategy of the war against Japan in its broadest aspects, the heavy air raids of recent days and the continual projection of air bases closer to the Philippines presage the events that are to come.

The Allied commanders in the Pacific, in view of their previous achievements, may be expected to be ready for stupendous assaults against the Japs when Allied power from Europe is released for their use.

Speeding Yule Gifts

Those who are under the impression that the Army isn't tremendously interested in having them send Christmas packages to the troops overseas and in getting them into the hands of the service men before the holidays, haven't heard of the great effort made by Army engineers in completing the new $3,500,000 post office in Long Island City, New York, to expedite the shipment of this year's holiday mail to America's fighting men.

Ground was broken for the huge Army post office concentration center on May 22 and it was planned to complete the building by September 1, before the Christmas mail rush got under way. The center, which contains more than 500,000 square feet of floor space and covers 14½ acres, occupies the site of the former Madison Square Garden Bowl. A total of 379,000 concrete blocks was used in its construction, and 1,000 workmen were employed 10 hours a day at the peak period of building.

On September 1, Col. Edgar W. Garbisch, New York district engineer of the United States Army Engineers, turned the building over to Army postal authorities for occupancy.

The Army center will handle parcels, newspapers and magazines, everything except letter mail, for the millions of men and women stationed on 11 fronts. The services of 10,000 civilian post office employes and 4,000 soldiers will be utilized to handle the parcels when the Christmas mail rush begins on September 15. Three railroad spurs inside the building will help to keep the mail moving, and electrically-driven vehicles will handle intramural distribution.

Colonel Garbisch says the men who constructed the mail center worked at top efficiency during the peak of the heat spell without a murmur because "they realized what the job meant to the troops on the fighting fronts." It is now up to civilians to keep the new post office busy by sending Christmas packages to the service men.

Of course, the building was constructed to handle parcels and newspapers all the year 'round, but the Christmas mailing season is almost at hand, and obviously that comes first. It would be a mean-spirited civilian who would neglect to send Yuletide gifts to the men winning the greatest war in history for Uncle Sam.

Americans may be in Berlin in time to assure the Russian troops a hearty welcome.

Postwar Pending Legislation Inadequate

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2—It's hard to understand the attitude of the men and women on Capitol Hill who are carpentering the legislation so vital for the period immediately following the end of hostilities.

The senate passed a demobilization-unemployment compensation bill that was in many respects woefully inadequate. It was rigid and arbitrary in many of its provisions.

That was the senate, the traditionally conservative senate. Now what is the House doing? The House, the liberal second chamber with its mass representation as our forefathers saw it, has chipped away the senate's George bill until it would hardly serve as an economic umbrella in normal times.

At first you might think it had something to do with getting elected. After all, that November date is not so far off. But I believe it goes deeper than that.

Thinking In Past

It goes back to a kind of thinking which apparently has persisted in spite of all the bitter economic lessons of the past 15 years. Men like Representative Knutson of Minnesota, who talks about "the gimmes," and Representative Sumners of Texas, who talks about the huge debt, sum it up.

Back of it is the suspicion—yes, almost the conviction—that most people are malingerers, lazy; they'd rather live on a government handout than take an honest job of hard work.

That's exactly the kind of talk you heard all through the Hoover-Roosevelt depression, when eight or nine or ten million people were jobless. "They don't want to work."

At the very start of the years of mass unemployment, a thorough investigation by capable people was made of the attitude of the men and women suddenly thrown out on the street through no fault of their own. The result was published in one of the most moving books I've ever read, called "Some Folks Won't Work," by Clinch Calkins, showing the one thing they wanted was a chance to earn a decent living.

Of course, there may be backwaters where the pay has been so low that men would rather go fishing and take a government dole. There's a fringe of "unemployables." But this is so small compared with most self-respecting Americans. Look what happened when the war boom gave them a chance at jobs.

Compromise Worked Out

A group in the House—Democrats like Representative Dingell of Michigan, and Republicans like Representative La Follette of Indiana—worked out a bill that was a compromise between what the senate had adopted and the Murray-Kilgore proposal, which was loosely drawn and over-generous. As I write this, it has no chance of passage, scarcely a chance of even glancing consideration.

What the House is doing, as Representative Eberharter of Pennsylvania pointed out, is to go contrary to all the advice for dealing with the post-war transition that came from experts whose advice the House solicited. Men such as Marion Folsom, treasurer of the Eastman-Kodak Corp., and General Hines, administrator of veteran affairs who recognize the need for an economic umbrella in the storm that may hit us.

On the question of disposing of surplus property, the House is also at odds with the senate. In many respects, the House in this controversy is right, it seems to me.

Section 12 of the Senate Bill contains foolish provisions about surplus property going to municipalities, schools, churches, etc., at 50 per cent of the highest bid. The way would be open to all sorts of maladministration and trickery. A board of eight, in the senate bill, could hardly act with the efficiency of one good administrator.

Here is a revealing contrast. As passed by the senate, the unemployment compensation bill was to cover two years after the war's end; the House cut this to one year. But the surplus property measure applies for three years, and contract renegotiation for two years.

That puts property and money ahead of human beings. It won't go well with the average American.

THE WEATHER

From first to last throughout the year
Not many perfect days appear.
In winter, often we are told
For comfort it is much too cold.

And when at last comes spring again
Men grumble loudly at the rain.
When will the summer sun break through
And give us cloudless skies of blue?

Then summer! As the days slip by
We find the weather much too dry.
Farmers and city folk complain
And wish and watch the skies for rain.

Few perfect days! The golden fall
A little while entrances all;
A final blaze of bronze and red!
Then frost—and winter just ahead.

HINTS AND DINTS

Sun sets tonight 7:33. Sun rises tomorrow 6:26.

Opportunity never knocks at the door of a knocker.

It is better to know nothing than to know what isn't so.

As soon as people are old enough to know better, they don't.

We are told that there were reports of Jap submarines prowling off the west coast of California while President Roosevelt was on his three weeks' cruise...if the Japs knew the president was going to Hawaii, they knew more than the American people did.

Girls nowadays seem to think that beauty is knee deep.

Automobiles are generally like their drivers, the older they get the more knocking they do.

A kitchen is a place where they take things out of cans and put them on plates.

An officer on board a battleship was drilling his men.

"I want every man to lie on his back, put his legs in the air, and move them as if he were riding a bicycle," he explained. "Now begin. 1-2, 1-2, 1-2..."

After a short effort one of the men stopped, and the officer asked: "Why have you stopped, Murphy?"

"If you plaze, sor," was the reply "Oi'm coasting."

Justice is not only blind in some instances, but it has to be led around.

One generation makes money, the next burns it, and the next lives by sifting ashes.

It is embarrassing to pin your faith to something and then not be able to get the pin out when you want it.

Experience may be worth what it costs, but that's what you have to pay for it.

There is always room at the top of a ladder, but there are mighty few people who can do the balancing act when they get there.

Perhaps Nero fiddled while Rome was burning, but he didn't do it to keep the boys in line for the next election.

Better not invite comparison. Those who are upper class in one place would be lower class in another.

No matter what the experts say, the primaries prove only that certain candidates were disliked by a majority of the voters.

It's getting so Hitler is afraid to trust any of his pals, unless they are bumped off by the underground.

The proud militarists in Japan and Germany must feel a little humiliated by the fact that treachery and surprise have them their only victories.

Note on efficiency: Lack of workers causing dangerous shortage of mobile guns and heavy duty tires; factories still piling up surpluses of things we never can use.

Americanism: Officers and sergeants on a bomber fighting as comrades and equals; brass hats sending them to different places for their rest period.

A big shot can dodge income tax by laying most of his salary to be returned as pension. If that is legal, the fault is in the law.

At one replacement center, the wounded are bawled out for not saluting snappily. The officers in charge haven't yet smelled powder.

Now we live in daily dread. It is almost time for another new idiotic song to sweep the country.

The bond sale flopped. It "went over the top", but people bought the kind of bonds they could cash quickly—not the kind that really help.

If peace comes before congress can act, the shortage of goods and the ending of price controls will bring inflation that will hurt us worse than war.

Just about a month from now a lot of football coaches will be announcing plans for rebuilding for the 1945 season.

Grandpappy Jenkins says he understands places at the peace table will be about as hard to get as two seats on the 50-yard line.

A girl war worker may not necessarily balk at returning to house work. She simply would be refusing to reconvert from slacks to a kitchen apron.

GIRL TAKES BOY TO DANCE

"I have asked a boy to go with me to a dance that my club is giving. He is not acquainted with the "crowd." Should I dance with him exclusively all evening or will it be permissible for me to leave him alone and dance with the other boys who ask me? Also should I go with him when he parks the car or should I get out at the club house and meet him later?"—Jeanette.

Answer: He should suggest that he let you out at the club house before he goes on to park his car. You may then go in to do your primping and be ready by the time he has arrived.

Do not leave the poor boy stranded in a roomful of strangers. On the other hand, you need not limit yourself to him as a partner for the entire evening. Take him around and introduce him to all of the boys and girls you know that he may be free to cut in and dance with some other girl while you are off dancing with another boy. It's no fun clinging to one partner all evening.

Before accepting a dance with another boy, ask your escort if he minds. Really, there should be an exchange of partners so that no one will be left stranded.

Question: At a garden party, should the hostess receive on the lawn or in the living room?—Hostess.

Answer: She should receive on the lawn. The guests should be met by a servant or a member of the family and shown to the room wherein their wraps will be kept. Then they should be directed to the hostess on the lawn.

Unfair Comparison On Press Conferences

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2. SOME TIME AGO a newspaper correspondent, making a comparison between the two 1944 presidential candidates, declared that though Governor Dewey handled himself very well indeed, and displayed an admirable frankness, he was not quite as much at ease in his press conferences as is Mr. Roosevelt in his.

IT WOULD be amazing if he were. As President of the United States, Mr. Roosevelt possesses advantages in a press conference so great as to leave no real room for comparison with anyone else. All of these advantages, of course, are based on the immense prestige of the high office he occupies. This affords him a protection which no other public man possibly can enjoy. It prevents him from being cross-examined, contradicted or pinned down. It enables him, with impunity, to patronize, dominate, direct and, sometimes, insult. All of these things—and more—he has done in his press conferences—and all of them the representatives of the press have to take because he is the President.

THERE ISN'T a thing they can do about it. For example, at his first press conference after his return from the "trip of inspection" which took him across the country to Honolulu and back and, which, in the view of a vast number of people, had a distinct political flavor, Mr. Roosevelt, when asked what he had to say on the subject, branded the question as a "fool" question, said it had been asked by a reporter who accompanied him on the trip; that the reporter knew it was a fool question and that it had been "planted" by the news agency he represented. That was all the answer he gave. The correspondents could obtain no other. They couldn't ever try to obtain more.

IT COULD not be pointed out to him that on this trip he had diverted his special train to stop at Chicago for a conference with Chairman Hannegan, who was his manager at the convention; that he had had telephone conversations with other politicians on the trip; that the timing of the trip fitted perfectly into the Commander-in-Chief strategy on which his fourth-term effort is being based. None of these—and other things—could be brought to Mr. Roosevelt's attention after he had declared it a "fool" question and exhibited irritation at being asked it. The dignity of the Presidential office is such that the President cannot be argued with by his questioners. The accuracy of his statements cannot be questioned and resentment at his manners may not be shown.

THE REPORTERS knew that it was not a "fool" question. They knew it was a very timely, pertinent and proper one. But, not one man present dared say that—or repeat the question. That sort of thing cannot be done at a President's press conference. The topic just had to be dropped. It was the same way the same day on another matter. Reporters asked the President whether he had anything to say about the invitation to Mr. Willkie to discuss foreign policy with him. Mr. Roosevelt replied

The Parent Problem

By Garry C. Myers, Ph. D

FOSTER MOTHER'S BETTER

Always I have had great admiration for successful foster parents, and there are many such unselfish persons who with or without children of their own, have taken one or more children into their home for loving care.

In these war days and the days ahead, the number of children needing foster homes will have increased tremendously. Those persons who open their arms and homes and give their hearts and heads and hands to these children are doing far more good than they realize.

Often foster parents write me. Here is a sample: "I'm very glad I had been reading your column long enough (10 years or more) to have become thoroughly familiar with the ways to teach a child definite necessary restraints.

"We have no children of our own, but in the last four years have boarded nine different ones for long or short periods. It is surprising the number of reasons for a child needing care outside of its own home. (Then she relates several specific instances.) So you see parents aren't always at fault when children must be in the care of outsiders for a while. I think more people might be willing to assume this foster parenthood if they realized that fact.

Companionable Child

"For 11 months now we have had with us a little girl who is old enough to be companionable. Carol is 5½ years old. She is so intelligent and so cooperative that one is apt to think of her as older. She has a quick understanding of people's motives and intentions and a self-reliance that has been developed more than this quality and these understandings are sometimes developed in teen-age youngsters. I think it is because she has been

Need For WPB Is Seen Lessening Daily
Removal Of Wilson And Nelson Is Omen
Protocol Is Tough To Live Up To Now

By HELEN ESSARY
(Central Press Columnist)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—When the commotion over the letter "Dear Charlie—I hate to see you go," which the president wrote to Vice Chairman Wilson of the War Production Board, shall have died down over the air and in printer's ink, and the echo of WPB Donald Nelson's "Don't hurry home trip" to China shall have faded out over the North American continent, somebody will spring up to say:

"Why, don't you know the answer to all this rumpus? The War Production Board has finished its job. It isn't needed any more. Not really. War plants in every part of the country are slowing up. It's time for both Donald and Charlie to lay down their shovel and their hoe. Like 'Old Uncle Ned', there 'ain't no moh wo'k' for them to do. They better go where the good dollar a year men go—back to the outfits they came from."

Actually, conversion has been under way a long time, so the experts tell me. You may not have seen it with the naked eye. But behind the scenes industry has been oiling up its machinery for postwar production. There's no point in concealing the fact any longer.

Sic Semper Washington

Heard a funny story which is typical of Washington. A certain hostess phoned some prospective dinner guests on that 102-degrees-in-the-shade day, before the hot wave broke, and said to each telephonee: "I hate to ask you—but we're having an ambassador and his wife with us. Do you mind wearing a long skirted dress and digging out your husband's black tie and things? We've got to be formal for the sake of protocol." After much digging out accompanied by excusable profanity, the guests male and female did dig out the formal paraphernalia. And put same on over running perspiration.

Since the dinner was to be something of an occasion, the guests, including several senators and such important people, arrived quite promptly. The host was done up in a damp tuxedo and the hostess was in flowing satin down to her tip toes. At last the ambassador and his wife arrived. And what were they wearing? One guess for you—

The ambassador was in a business suit not too recently pressed. And madame the ambassadress—she had on a little short sports number of figured cotton. As I said at the beginning:

"Sic semper Washington!"

Some Washington maidens are galloping off to Alaska to find likely husbands. Horace Greeley said, "Young man, go west." Intuition, or is it instinct when speaking to many modern unmarried women, advises the neighborhood of the Bering sea as the most likely hunting ground.

Diamonds seem to grow as large as baby seals up in those Arctic regions. Anyhow, I've seen several engagement stones captured in northern latitudes which at first glance I thought were hunks of native ice.

Woman Correspondent Reports

Life for a woman war correspondent in London is not too, too divine. Exciting? Yes. But here's a confidential excerpt from May Craig's recent notes.

She was last year's president of the Woman's National Press club. When she is home in Washington working for her New England papers and asking sharp questions at Mr. Roosevelt's press conferences, she is called "The President's Loyal Opposition".

"You'd never bear up under this robot escaping life. We go out of London to get away from the flying bombs and sleep on the greatest variety of beds, cots, canvas hammocks and what have you. Maybe alone. Maybe with Red Cross workers, WACS, nurses. We sleep anyplace!

"You lug your own stuff and shiver of mornings while you wash. Thank heaven there is always hot water. The American hot water that is the astonishment of the British!

"One of my worst troubles is people who snore. I'm a light sleeper—or used to be. I'm getting so tired I can sleep anywhere. Wouldn't mind a lion in the next cot. Have been seeing old Washington friends but briefly. People just pass like ships in the night. You never know where they go. They just disappear."

What People Say

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Sen. McKellar, D., Tenn.: "I have read the broadcast of Lieut. Gen. Dittmar of the German army and it is a very earnest plea for peace, but we cannot afford to make peace with Germany until she has completely surrendered and we have occupied her country."

WASHINGTON — Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, in a message relayed to the war department and released in Washington: "I must urge you to keep flowing across the Atlantic at a maximum rate all those things including spare parts that a modern army and air force need in battle."

LAMAR, Mo.—Sen. Harry S. Truman, Democratic vice presidential nominee: "Make no mistake about the fact that once again we also have among us a group of isolationists as determined, as bitter, and as dangerous as the band who set themselves up against the league of nations and gave to Wilson's peace in 1920 a stab in the back."

Wallace says China needs a new deal. To date no Republican has come forward with the suggestion we give them ours.—Wichita Eagle.

LOOKING AT LIFE

By ERICH BRANDEIS

Isn't it funny how you sometimes connect two apparently entirely unrelated thoughts so that one forms an illustration for the other?

In case I am too obtruse, let me make it clearer.

I just read a little item about a Washington, D. C., apartment janitor who posted this notice in the hallway:

"Please put garbage in insinerator dam iffen I ain't tired of standing in other peeples slops."

It seems hardly possible that this bit of janitorial philosophy should remind one of the late William Lyons Phelps, beloved Yale professor of literature, and philosopher, whom I knew well and whose "Autobiography With Letters" I finished reading last night.

"Billy" Phelps loved people. He knew there was a little bit of bad in all of them, but he always tried to see the good in them.

"When one thinks of the vast folly displayed in human history," he wrote, "it is easy to despise human nature; but when one thinks of the many individuals who, with little money, little education, little ability, nevertheless, put up a brave front and meet the day's work with uncomplaining serenity, human nature seems sublime."

I couldn't help but wonder how "Billy" Phelps would have handled the garbage situation if he had been that Washington janitor.

I think he would first have realized that perhaps those careless tenants were tired from the day's work and, maybe, worn out from that awful Washington heat.

How Many Like Him?

I think he would have talked to each one of them individually and made friends of them.

But then how many "Billy" Phelpses are there in this world?

And yet, couldn't you and I and all of us like each other a little more, be a little more thoughtful of each other, criticize a little less, encourage a little more, and realize that life is only as pleasant as we make it for each other?

Why go through this all too short life with grudges and hatreds and envy and malice, when all of us are simply transient travels bound for a common destiny?

Nothing is so encouraging as a word of praise, nothing so depressing as criticism, sarcasm and condescension.

Last week a brilliant editor I know told an aspiring young writer that his manuscript was no good, that he'd never make good, that he ought to go into some other kind of work.

"Why did you do that?" I asked him.

"I gave him a million dollars worth of criticism, didn't I?" he replied.

"There isn't such a thing as a penny's worth of discouragement," I told the editor. "But a few words of encouragement may be worth a fortune!"

The World and the Mud Puddles

"RIP" WOULD BE SHOCKED

The Democratic Rip Van Winkle, waking from a sleep of twenty years might well look around in bewilderment at what has happened to his Party and the Party of his fathers since he settled himself down for a nap. Looking backward even so short a distance as 1932, he might be well pleased to read the brave pronunciamentos of Democracy which condemned wasteful expenditures and denounced the domination of the country by "needless and autocratic bureaus." He might even rejoice in the platform declarations in favor of economy and against the wasteful expenditure of public funds for purely political purposes.

But waking up, and following the course of events thenceforward, this Democratic Rip Van Winkle would be amazed, if not stupefied, by the contradiction between Democratic promises and Democratic performances.

The Democratic Party (originally called the Republican Party) was more or less an echo of the Declaration of Independence, whose author was recognized as the godfather of Jeffersonian Democracy. Its fundamental principle was "equality of opportunity to all, special privilege to none." Never in any age has there been any question of the justice or wisdom of this sound and peculiarly American doctrine.

The amazing thing, to this awakening Rip Van Winkle, must be that the intruders into the Party of his fathers, taking over possession lock, stock and barrel, have entirely perverted the original Jeffersonian doctrine and undertaken to make the Democratic Party a Party of special privilege for a class—the class being a particular labor organization with self-appointed leadership. It was not within the concept of Jefferson or Madison, or of any of the truly Democratic leaders in the formulation of our government, that any class, agrarian, capitalistic or workers, should be predominant. The theory of Democracy, as they comprehended it was that class and caste should

Split In Ranks Of Nazi Guard Now Reported

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—(INS)—A split within the ranks of Heinrich Himmler's Nazi elite guard force was reported today by two persons reaching the Swiss border from Berlin, according to the office of war information.

The OWI, quoting the two unidentified persons' first hand views, reported that the travelers declared:

"That German military reverses had caused a split within the elite guard, the imprisonment of some SS leaders, an increase in gestapo executions and a tendency for jittery Nazis to take out personal post-war 'insurance' by performing favors for non-Nazis."

One of the travelers was quoted as saying that it is "absurd" to believe the SS is united behind Himmler.

Predicting that the elite guard will crumble, the informant described its members as falling into three categories. He classified these as the 'fanatics, those who joined because they belonged to the 'racial elite,' and those who are afraid of losing their necks."

The Berlin resident described how "many Nazis are trying to show non-Nazis small favors," and revealed that some farmers' wives are consorting with foreign workers in hope of being remembered after the war.

Former Ziegfeld Beauty Is Beaten

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—(INS)—Marjorie Whittington, one-time Ziegfeld Follies beauty whose lovely legs were insured for a cool million dollars, swore out a complaint today in Yorkville court charging her husband, Stephen Tomilowitz, with, among other things, mistreating the valuable gams.

The former musical comedy player said Tomilowitz broke down the door to her apartment because he wanted her to pay a bill he owed at a nearby saloon. When she refused, said Miss Whittington, Tomilowitz blacked her eye, knocked out several teeth and kicked her famous legs.

The summons is returnable Sept. 7 and police are looking for Tomilowitz.

BAINBRIDGE, Ga., Sept. 2.—(INS)—Kenneth L. Sowers, a flying cadet at the Bainbridge army air field, was killed in a plane crash, public relations officers revealed today.

The 24-year-old cadet crashed 11 miles northeast of Bainbridge yesterday during a combat training flight in a BT-13A.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary S. Sowers, and an 18-months-old son of 411 Juniper street, York, Pa., and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Sowers.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—(INS)—The death of Admiral Shiro Takasu, as a result of "illness contracted on the battlefield," was reported today by the Japanese Domei news agency in a broadcast intercepted by the FCC.

Tentative Plan For Surplus War Supplies Board

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—(INS)—House and Senate conferees agreed tentatively today on a four-man board and an adminstrator to handle the disposal of an estimated one hundred billion dollars in surplus war properties.

At the same time conferees who met today declared that "real progress" has been made in settling other differences in the legislation which has been approved by the House and Senate.

As passed by the Senate, the bill proposed an eight-man board to handle reconversion, while the House version of the legislation would have established a single administrator.

"We have made real progress," said Sen. Elbert D. Thomas (D), Utah, conference chairman. "We feel strongly that the differences between the House and the Senate in disposing of surplus property will be ironed out within a reasonable time."

Thomas explained that the board will be a general policy-making group and after it decides on its policies they will turn over to the administrator "and thereafter the board will not interfere with the administrator as long as he is carrying out those policies."

Polish Appeal For Allied Aid

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—(INS)—From the heart of New York's Polish colony today arose a cry to President Roosevelt for instant succor of the Patriots battling under heavy odds against the Nazi garrison inside Russian-beleaguered Warsaw.

More than 2,500 persons at a mass meeting on the fifth anniversary of Hitler's invasion of Poland, adopted by acclamation a resolution addressed to the White House.

They asked the President to do all in his power so that "immediate military aid be rendered to the heroic Patriots of Warsaw, who through incomprehensible circumstances have been devoid of such well earned aid and assistance."

The rally, sponsored by the central group of New York Polish-American societies, was addressed by Jan Ciechanowski, ambassador of the Polish government-in-exile; Newbold Morris, president of the New York City council; Rep. Samuel Dickstein and several officials of the societies.

Deny Lindbergh Connected With Gerald Smith

DETROIT, Sept. 2.—(INS)—Ford Motor Company officials denied today for a second time there was any connection between Charles A. Lindbergh and Gerald L. K. Smith, America First candidate for president.

Several weeks ago, Harry Bennett, personnel director for Ford, stated that Smith's attempts to link his name with that of Lindbergh were purely political moves.

"Lindbergh does not support in any way the political belief of Smith and his followers," company officials said today.

"Since Mr. Bennett's first statement, however, Smith has again used the name of Lindbergh in connection with the America First activities," stated the officials. Smith had claimed he had asked the "Lone Eagle" to become a candidate for president on the America First ticket, but that he had refused.

"Lindbergh, in the Pacific war theater an an aide to aviation officers of the army and navy, has had no chance to comment in any way on the use of his name by Smith and Smith is taking advantage of this situation," the statement continued. "We feel that it is only just that we, again, make it plain and clear that Mr. Lindbergh carries no flags for Smith or his party."

Previously when any Yank song went out over the Bulgarian radio, they were careful to offer the lyric in German.

More Than 1000 Captured Yank Fliers Rescued

By FRANK CONNIFF
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

AN AIRPORT OUTSIDE OF BUCHAREST, Aug. 31—(Delayed)—Units of the Allied Fifteenth Air Force assigned to the Mediterranean theater arrived at this airport close to the Romanian capital today on the most dramatic mission of its career.

It was the rescue of more than 1,000 American airmen who bailed out of their bombing and fighting planes during air battles which preceded and enabled Soviet capture of the great Romanian oil fields at Ploesti, chief source of fuel for the shattered war machine of Nazi Germany.

The fliers had been interned by Romanian authorities close by the airport when their planes were forced out of the air.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

that he had never heard of any such invitation. That ended that so far as the conference was concerned. The New York Herald Tribune next day did repeat emphatically that an invitation to Mr. Willkie had been sent from the White House on White House stationery and been received by Mr. Willkie.

BUT, NO ONE had the hardihood to recite this fact to Mr. Roosevelt after his statement. It would have been equivalent to doubting the President's word and that just isn't done openly in a press conference. Yet, there wasn't a reporter present who did not believe there was a basis for the published story. It had been printed widely all over the country days before, with no White House denial by the astute and alert Presidential secretary, Mr. Early. A week later Mr. Roosevelt was compelled to admit that he had sought a conference with Mr. Willkie exactly as had been stated. Reporters would not submit to this sort of equivocation from anyone else. They have to submit when it comes from the President—but they do not like it.

CONTRAST all this with a Dewey press conference. The prestige of his present office affords him no comparable protection. Either patronage, evasion or inaccuracy would be instantly and openly resented by the attending newspapermen. At the Dewey press conferences no holds are barred and there is nothing to check the questioners, except good manners and a sense of fairness. Among the men who attend the Dewey conferences are some who are extremely hostile to him, eager to trip him up. These ask the most embarrassing questions of which they can think. There are no reasons why, if Mr. Dewey's answer to a question is considered inadequate or evasive, the question should not be repeated and the subject followed up—and it is.

GOVERNOR DEWEY is in no position to dispose of an awkward inquiry by saying it is a "fool" question, or by showing temper. That sort of thing for him would be pretty near fatal from the press standpoint. He has to "take it" but the President does not have to "take it"—and he shouldn't. The Presidential office is entitled to a respect due no other. But the fact that he commands and gets that respect ought to make the incumbent exceedingly careful about taking advantage of his position, abusing his power and bullying his questioners. This President is anything but careful about these things. With knowledge of his power and both the ability and the willingness to use it, it is not surprising Mr. Roosevelt is at greater ease in press conferences than Mr. Dewey. The President dominates and controls his gatherings in a way Mr. Dewey cannot do. Nor can any other man who is not president. The only way Mr Dewey can handle the embarrassing or improper question is to say "no comment." Otherwise he has to come through. The comparison isn't a fair one.

SLICING BREAD

A cut with a bread knife means a sore hand. The bread knife should be sharp. Keep a sharp knife in a place by it's self so that the edge will not be dulled.

To cut bread, put the loaf down on the table. Use the knife like a saw. Cut away from yourself. Keep your fingers away from the knife edge.

Better use the heel of the loaf a little thick than cut your finger trying to make an extra cut.

Cut only as much as will be used right away. Cut bread dries out quickly.

THE WORLD AND THE MUD PUDDLES

stop at the ballot box and that all men, regardless of station, should share equally in the responsibilities of government?

But this waking Rip Van Winkle, looking at the record of the past twelve years, would be chagrined and disillusioned to note that a supposedly Democratic government has traded itself to groups, to which groups it looks for perpetuation in power. He would observe that the ancient slogan of special privileges for none has been perverted to mean special privileges for those that deliver the votes. He would be further amazed that equality before the law means only special advantage from the law for those who are able to render special political service to the Party in power.

Scanning his Party's history back to the days of Grover Cleveland—a Democratic conveniently forgotten by a generation of New Dealers—he would read these words graven large on the pages of democracy: "It is not the duty of the government to support the people, but the duty of the people to support the government." Recalling these sane, American words, he might wonder how the Henry Wallaces, the Rex Tugwells, the Hillmans and the Bridges came into possession and control of a Party which once represented the aspirations and hopes of all the people.

It is a sad awakening for thousands of good old-fashioned Americans who once took seriously the label of the Democratic Party. They have awakened already in Texas and other points South. They are awakening in other States by the thousands. They will awaken elsewhere, let us hope, in numbers and strength sufficient to repudiate and halt the perversion of a great and once powerful institution of democracy into an incongruous combination of social experimenters and fellow travelers. The degeneration of the Democratic Party is not only a political, but a national, tragedy.

THE PARENT PROBLEM

in several different boarding homes and at all times under the loving influence of her own mother.

"Everyone has been watching me with a critical eye. Since in 12 years we have had no children, my friends have often talked over their parenthood problems with me—but the conversation would end, 'Yes, you know all the theories, but if you had one of your own.'

"It seems, too, that Carol had to test me in every way. Would she really have to stay out of the street? Did I mean business about the boundaries set where she could play without special permission? Could she talk me out of the edict that she must wear leggings if the temperature was below 50? All of these things and many more are unquestioned now. We have to do less ordering than any parents we know with two exception. I believe Carol is happier than she would be without some of 'these certainties.

Liberal With Praise

"With Carol, too, it is especially important to be liberal with praise and approval and assurance of our love and not demand from her love in return. We never tell her, 'You ought to be grateful.' We don't feel that way, in the least. We are so grateful for the richness she brings us."

Then she relates a delightful conversation as she and this child were shelling peas together. "You see, Dr. Myers, why I use the word 'Companionable.' She is so much more than that, lovable, beautiful, awe-inspiring. We have learned the harder lesson—to give them up when the time comes."

To that foster mother I replied: "It's letters like yours that help me keep heart. I do so admire your ideals and ways with young children and marvelous insight. I just know, though, it must pain your heart to give up a child after having him for some time."

Some Impressions Of Council In Session

Playing substitute for the regular city hall reporter this week, a new, and definitely unexperienced, cub meekly stepped into the council chamber in city hall for the first time in her life and found out to her surprise that the mayor and council do not sit about a round table like King Arthur and his knights.

And neither, she also found, do they observe the formality prescribed in the British House of Lords. The five councilmen, including the mayor, and the city clerk, meet twice or oftener, every week, as the legislative body of the city, and then carry out their separate duties as the city's executives.

The council chamber is a large room, one corner of which is walled off to form the local office of civilian defense. Up at the front, at a high desk that looks like a judge's bench, sits the mayor, chairman of the council, and the city clerk who calls the roll, reels off the minutes, and takes the vote on all the matters that come up.

Below the high desk, seated at four smaller desks arranged in the form of an "E" with the middle bar left out, are the other four councilmen, while to the left of the mayor and the clerk is the desk of the city solicitor who straightens out the legal tangles. Never mind the fifth chair down there with the councilmen, that's the new reporter.

Colored up with war posters around the OCD room, the walls of the rest of the room are dull. Behind the mayor is the photograph of the late James A. Gardner, who, the reporter is told, was the father of the third-class city act, and over to one side is a handsomely framed portrait, which turns out to be a representation of the Battle of Gettysburg.

This is the room where a group of New Castle citizens, elected by the rest of the town, discuss, argue, and decide. Their problems—street paving, a new water line, the man who doesn't like his assessment—are not of the magnitude of the questions at the Dumbarton Oaks conference, but they are the ones which come the closest to making the town a place you want to live in.

Sometimes the matters can be disposed of with no more than the city clerk's statement of the problem, and a vote by the council. Other times there are not only discussions, but even heated arguments, when cigars and cigarettes burn out, forgotten, until the question is settled.

German Report Says Nazis Are Fighting Hard

LONDON, Sept. 2—(INS)—Heavy defensive fighting by German troops along the entire French front from Arras to Verdun was reported today by a Nazi high command communique.

Renewed attacks against the port of Brest by American forces were admitted but the communique alleged that they met with no success.

"In the Rhone valley all enemy attempts to bar the way to our troops in the Valence area were again foiled yesterday," the statement said.

Then turning to the long-range artillery fire which battered England yesterday, the statement said: "Heavy long-range naval guns last night shelled British ports on the south coats with good results. Replying to British long-range shelling, an enemy battery at St. Margaret's bay was so heavily hit by German fire that only one gun remainded in action."

OIL TANK BURNS IN MERCER FIRE

MERCER, Sept. 2.—Fire in the new Mercer industry, the Welker Tool Company, engaged in the production of tools for the army and navy at the present time, caused a damage of several hundred dollars. The fire was located in a quenching oil tank, the blaze breaking out about 8:05 p.m. Thursday and was caused by the failure of an oil circulator to operate.

The tank contained five barrels of oil.

Record Crowds Are Traveling Says Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 2.—(INS)—Despite repeated pleas from travel agencies and the Office of Defense Transportation, record crowds were reported today to be converging on rail and bus facilities in Labor Day traveling.

Spurred on by predictions of fair weather ahead, the exodus from the city took on grand proportions.

"We're already running two and three extra sections on every run," a Greyhound bus dispatcher reported. "We expect travel to be heavier Monday than it was last July 4."

Pennsylvania Railroad officials anticipated week-end travel would be five per cent higher than it was last year. Extra cars were being put into use by the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie and Baltimore & Ohio Railroads.

'Amos' Is Married To Jane Stoneham

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 2.—(INS)—Hollywood learned today of the marriage of Freeman Gosden, the "Amos" of radio's "Amos 'n' Andy," to Jane Stoneham, daughter of the late Charles Stoneham, once owner of the New York Giants.

An announcement by the NBC press department said they were married at Standwood Murphy's Larrabee ranch, near Eureka, Cal. Gosden's first wife died two years ago.

Cruelty To Rat Charge Is Made

DENVER, Sept. 2.—(INS)—The law protecting animals from cruel treatment pertains to all animals, wild or domesticated. That was the opinion today of acting Judge David Oyler, who levied a fine of $25 and costs against Harvey Layton of Denver, charged with cruelty to a rat.

The charges were preferred by state humane officers who testified Layton had tethered a rat by the tail to a tree to "educate" two adolescent cats. The officers said they found the rat with a broken leg, squealing in terror, while the cats merely watched the exhibition with "a rather puzzled expression."

August List Shows 14 Building Permits

Although no new homes are being put up, 14 permits for $27,050 worth of building were granted by the city during the month of August, Registry Clerk Neal Williams said this morning.

Largest items on the list were five houses to be remodeled at a cost of $21,065. The smallest item was the building of a fence, valued at $10. Other permits were for six garages, at a cost of $2,925; one poultry house, $50, and one store, $3,000.

Michigan leads the states in value of war contracts reported between June, 1940, and February, 1944, with more than $20,000,000,000; California and New York tied for second place with nearly $17,000,000,000 each.

Labor has the right to smile this Labor Day. For Labor's record in this war is staggering to the imagination. Indeed, this war, drawing near its closing days, could not have been fought at all, let alone fought to certain victory, without Labor and the munitions and supplies that Labor has furnished. So, we offer our small tribute to the great body of Labor and in the days to come, the days of peace, we want to see Labor get its just, deserved reward.

Citizen-Soldier Plan Is Favored

General Marshall And Others Favor Establishing Of Citizen-Soldier Army In Future

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—(INS)—Gen. George C. Marshall and other U. S. army planners were on record today as favoring a post-war "citizen-soldier" army with a small nucleus of professionals and large reserves to insure America's position as a world power.

The war department policy was contained in a "circular" just sent out to all army posts under the name of General Marshall, army chief of staff.

After weighing the advantages of such professional fighting machines as those of Japan and Germany, the circular points out that the United States does not approve an army dominated by "a special caste of professional soldiers."

Develop Leaders

In supporting the "citizen-army" system, the circular points out that that type of military organization has been responsible for the victories achieved by American arms in World War 1 and 2.

Under that system, leadership is not concentrated in the professional soldier and all soldiers are encouraged to develop a capacity for leadership.

"This is the type of army which President Washington proposed to the first congress as one of the essential foundations of the new American republic..."

Over 28,000 Paid To Swim In Pool At Cascade Park

Final statistics showing the number of paid admissions to the Cascade Park pool also show that, either because of the increasing popularity of swimming, the number of swimmers this year exceeded those of last year by several thousand, City Controller William A. Moore revealed today.

Not counting servicemen and women, who were admitted free, the daily average was 381 admissions, dropping below that on cool days and going up as high as 1,600 on the really hot ones. Between May 30, when the pool opened, and August 15, when it closed, 28,210 admission swere recorded.

Golf, as well as swimming, was popular this year, according to the records of the Municipal golf course. Besides the occasional players, 102 persons signed up for season memberships, whereas only 46 signed up last year.

OCD Groups Schedule Inspection Meetings

All civilian defense groups are meeting sometime before September 13, according to a mobilization and inspection order issued by the state OCD coordinator Francis Sargent said today.

Group leaders have been ordered to make out a report of the number present, and to account for those who are absent because of work or sickness. A full report of all property, gas masks, helmets, etc., is also to be obtained from those to whom the property was issued.

If this report is finished and sent in to the local OCD office before September 13, it will take the place of the usual lengthy mobilization and inspection meeting, Mr. Sargent said. The full cooperation of all OCD personnel will be needed.

U. S. Seizure Of More Mines Is Imminent

By PHILLIPS J. PECK
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—Gradual Federal seizure of some 70 key coal mines appeared inescapable today as the Foremen's Union of the United Mine Workers made it plain that supervisory employes will work for the government but not for the coal operators without a contract.

With 10 Pennsylvania pits already under operation by the Secretary of Interior, the War Labor Board was expected to refer immediately to President Roosevelt for seizure an additional four mines in that state employing approximately [illegible] ers who are now idle with a resultant loss of 10,000 tons of coal daily.

Foremen at 19 other mines in Pennsylvania were to ballot today on whether to strike. Strike votes were held yesterday at six mines in West Virginia and similar ballots will be held next week at 40 other mines in Kentucky and West Virginia.

In Pittsburgh, John McAlpine, president of the Mine Supervisory Union, announced that he had ordered foremen back to work in the 10 seized pits but that strikes will continue in other mines "until an agreement is reached with the coal operators or until the government takes over the mines." McAlpine's statement made it clear that the mine supervisory employes would ignore a WLB appeal to return to work on the first shift this morning at the Springfield Coal Company Mine No. 2, Nanty Glo, Pa.; the Heisley Coal Company Mine No. 3, Nanty Glo; the Monroe Mining Company, Revloc, Pa., and the Imperial Coal Company, Nettleton, Pa.

Hence, the WLB will have no other course than to refer these four cases to President Roosevelt for action.

Lieutenant Will Know Fate Today

Lieut. Wassing Charged With Killing Of Woman By Flying Plane Low Over Lake

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Minn., Sept. 2.—(INS)—The fate of Lt. Kenneth W. Wassing of Minneapolis, charged with leading a flight of three planes which flew low over Lake Margarethe, one of them striking and killing a woman in a boat, was to be placed in the hands of a court martial of nine officers today, following testimony by defense witnesses.

The prosecution completed its case yesterday after Walter G. Myer of Madeira, O., told the court a dramatic story of how his mother, Mrs. Mary Myer, 72, had been killed by an Army plane that swooped down on their fishing boat.

In sea battles, it used to be the custom to treat men with minor wounds before those seriously hurt so they could return quickly to their posts.

HEROS ON THE HOMEFRONT

There are no Silver Stars . . . Congressional Medals of Honor . . . Oak Leaf Clusters, etc., for the American workingman. Yet in the present conflict he has proven his honor, his loyalty and his devotion to duty in as full a measure as the man in uniform. Ask the boys in the front line . . . or the enemy troops that have surrendered, why victory for our side is so certain . . . why it is getting closer every day. There's only one answer. The overwhelming supply and the definite superiority of the American-made implements of war. Without willing, intelligent and loyal men and women on the home front, our great nation would still be fighting a defensive war.

On Monday our nation pays a debt of gratitude to the working men and women of America. Normally it's a holiday. This year it's just another day in the week . . . because VICTORY comes first.

YOUTH SERVICE PLAN OPPOSED

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 2.—(INS)—President Roosevelt's recently proposed youth service plan, under which young men and women would be required to devote a year to serving the nation, today had been described by Vivian Kellems, bitter foe of the administration, as "the most un-American suggestion ever made."

The Westport, Conn., manufacturer told a Rotary club meeting that the plan, first proposed by Mrs. Roosevelt two years ago, was an "exact duplicate" of the Hitler youth movement.

South Africa is taking a census of its cattle, sheep, goats and pigs.

A gallon of vinegar weighs more in the winter than in the summer, this being because of the contraction and expansion of the vinegar due to changes in temperature.

During the heat of the summer months the vinegar, as any other liquid, will expand and thus the weight will be slightly less because a gallon jug will hold less.

By-products that could be made from 100 tons of bituminous coal would include 400 pounds of dyes, 40 pounds of medicines, ½ pound of perfume, ½ pound of flavors.

"Eat It Up, Wear It Out, Make It Do, Do Without"

That old fashioned axiom has come into its own during this war. We have learned to save food, wear clothes that once we would have discarded, to repair our things and make them last. All in the interests of the war.

Truck operators know what it means to "make it do". Trucks have been repaired again and again, equipment has been nursed along, tires have been recapped, and somehow the trucks have been kept rolling along, doing the job in spite of difficulties that once might have been thought unconquerable.

But trucks cannot go on forever. Merchandise has to be moved and today it moves on rubber. Unless the transportation system is to fail, there must be more tires, more parts, more new trucks. Truck operators have learned how to "make it do" but the nation and the war cannot learn to "do without". Trucks must roll if the war is to be kept in high gear.

Camp Ends For High Gridders; Do Fine Work

Fine Results Obtained From Week In Camp At Muddy Creek Falls

POLISHING UP STARTS MONDAY

With five and a half days of intensive training back of them, the New Castle High school "Red Hurricane" football squad broke camp this afternoon and came back to town, bronzed, and ready for the polishing up next week at Taggart Stadium in preparation for the opening game next Friday night under the lights at Taggart stadium with Har-Brack high school.

The varsity squad and the second and third teams played an intercamp game shortly before noon today as the last official act of the 1944 training program. Friday, with perfect grid weather prevailing, the squad was given two tough workouts morning and afternoon consisting mostly of blocking, signal drills and scrimmage of the light variety.

Injuries Very Light

New Castle High was very fortunate this year at camp in not having any injuries of a serious nature, outside of a few minor bruises the boys are all in excellent shape and rarin' to get at that tough 1944 program.

Head Coach Phil Bridenbaugh had fine assistance with the camp drills from George "Gig" Thomas, Bill Klee, Paul Cuba, Austin Cowmeadow, George Binder and Tom Smathers, the latter three junior high coaches. All helped out and made the going easier for the Old Fox.

Very Fine Camp

Faculty Manager Ralph H. Gardner ran a well regulated camp and the food was the finest it has ever been. The boys took off weight on the playing field and put it back on at the dinner and supper tables.

A morning workout Monday, Labor Day, is on schedule for the boys at Taggart stadium, it was announced at 10 o'clock. There is a lot of polishing up to do in the next few days getting ready for the lid lifter. Sunday the boys will get a well deserved rest.

Tickets for the Har-Brack game will go on sale at the Sporting Goods Store at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning. Season tickets will be sold all week long, Mills announced today. Those who have season tickets reserved are asked to call for them.

Frisch Signs For Season Of 1945

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 2.—(INS)—President William E. Benswanger Friday announced he had given another year's contract to Pittsburgh Pirates Manager Frankie Frisch.

"I'm highly satisfied with the work Frisch has been doing," Benswanger said. "The club is presently in second place and I know if it weren't for the war, which has drained off some of our best players, we might be on top. Frisch has done a good job."

Frisch is serving his fifth year as the Pirates manager. His contracts have always been one-year affairs, the management pointed out.

Under his tutelage, the Pirates finished fourth in the National League three times and fifth once.

Shenango Lacks Veteran Players

Coach Eddie Nahas Has But One Lineman And Four Backs Left From 1943 Team

Shenango High football team will open the 1944 season Friday afternoon, Sept. 15, with Freedom High playing at the East New Castle field, and right now some 30 young men are working out daily under the watchful eye of Coach Eddie Nahas to be ready for the opening gong.

Coach Nahas gives a dismal outlook on the 1944 season, with only a sprinkling of letter winners back on the squad this year. Anthony Morrone is the only lineman who won his letter last year, and in the backfield at the moment and having the edge for varsity posts Nahas has Tanner, Fordyce, Henderson and Ziegler.

"The line will be big and green this season, Nahas announced.

Moose Team Wins Golf League Title

Failure Of Spalding A. C. Players To Show Up For Contest Last Night Gives Moose Pennant

New Castle Moose again captured the Sylvan Heights Golf league title when the Spalding A. C. failed to put in their appearance Friday evening for a postponed match from Wednesday evening.

The Moose needed to win but half the four games left to be played with the Spaldings in order to clinch the title, but with the latter team failing to put in their appearance, Moose claimed four points by forfeit, which would give them more than enough to win.

The champions were hard-pressed both in the first and second halves of the league by the Saegertowns, who had a strong team in the field this year.

This is the third year the Moose have won the title.

Ellwood Eagles Explain Position

The following letter received by The News Sport department today is self explanatory:

Sept. 2, 1944.

Sports Editor,
New Castle, News.

Just for the records, and not to prolong any arguments as this is our final answer.

The Ellwood Eagles challenged Mr. Reese's Industrial league team for the City Championship, which he would not accept, so in all fairness to the city, an Industrial league champion whose league restrictions bar half of the city real stars could not be called City Champions.

The only games Mr. Reese's wonder team played outside of the league was with a team from Warren who beat Mr. REESE'S team three games and in the first game really shellacked them 16 to 1 and to really make it stick an all-star team from the 'Industrial League" of which Mr. Reese's team was so much superior? gave them another trimming 7 to 3 last Sunday. The Ellwood Eagles still want to play New Castle to make it a real Series.

Yours in Sports,
FRANK POHOLSKY,
Ellwood City Eagle Softball team.

Cozy Corners To Play Dean Park

Crucial Tilt Will Be Staged At George Washington Field Monday Afternoon

In a game which is expected to decide the second half championship in the American Legion Junior league, the Cozy Corners, present league leaders, will face the strong Dean Park team, which defeated them last Sunday in a postponed tilt at George Washington field, Monday afternoon.

The contest will start at 2:30 o'clock and is expected to draw a large crowd as both teams are putting up a good brand of baseball.

If Dean Park wins, it will tie up the race for the second half and result in a playoff. If Cozy Corners win, no playoff will be necessary as it will give them a two-game margin over their opponents.

Brownies-Yanks Both Defeated

Boston Red Sox And Tigers Keep Pace In Hot American League Race

PIRATES HAND CARDS SURPRISE

By JOHN CASHMAN
(International News Service Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—The American League pennant race might be the best seen in decades, but you can't prove it by Paul Waner. The veteran outfielder, bought up by the New York Yankees yesterday after being released by the Brooklyn Dodgers, was inserted as a pinch-hitter against the Washington Senators. The rest of the time he just sat on the bench and viewed what he must have regarded as rather weird baseball.

The Yankees dropped a 10 to 7 decision to the Senators, keeping two games behind the Browns, and it is true the Yankees literally threw the game away. As a matter of fact, both teams tried to give the contest away but the Yankees, through perseverance, succeeded.

Tigers Top Browns

The Brownies lost to the Detroit Tigers, 6 to 3, when the Tigers scored five runs in the first three innings. Dick Wakefield and Rudy York were on the job, of course. Wakefield hitting a two-run homer in the third and Rudy clouting another one in the fourth. Hal Newhouser chalked up his 22nd win on six hits. Nelson Potter was tabbed for the loss.

The Boston Red Sox kept close to the pace when they beat out a 4 to 3 triumph over the Philadelphia Athletics.

The Chicago Whitesox topped the Cleveland Indians 5-4 in a night session that lasted 12 innings before the windy city aggregate broke the knot and ended the game.

Pirates Trim Cards

In the National League, the leading St. Louis Cards dropped a close 3 to 2 decision to the Pittsburgh Pirates when, in the sixth inning, Babe Dahlgren whacked a two-run double and Frankie Gustine hit a game-winning single. Fritz Oestermueller scattered twelve hits to chalk up the victory.

The Boston Braves took a double bill from the Philadelphia Phillies, 3 to 2 and 7 to 4.

The Brooklyn Dodgers trounced the New York Giants, 8 to 1. Art Herring, 37-year-old right hander reclaimed from the minors several weeks ago, kept the Giants to four measly hits.

The Chicago Cubs took the length of the Cincinnati Reds, 3 to 2.

Steve Kovach Is Now Pro Golfer

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 2.—(INS)—Steve Kovach appropriately celebrated his entrance into the ranks of the professionals today by laying claim to the pro money in the Western Pennsylvania Golf Association's tourney at the Pittsburgh Field Club course.

Signed up by the Allegheny Valley Club just before the tournament, Kovach shot a 34-36—70, thus taking the pro title. He was also a member of Brackenridge Heights Country Club team which took the pro-amateur honors.

Moose Schedule Twin Bill With West Pittsburg

Double Bill Sunday At Lee Avenue Field To Start At 2:30 O'Clock, Bronze Plays Universals

SHENANGO POTTERY CALLS GAME OFF

Lee avenue field on the west side will be the scene Sunday of a double-header city league game between the Moose club and West Pittsburgh (weather permitting). The first game, according to Manager "Fiz" Rodenbaugh of the Moose will start at 2:30 o'clock. There will be two seven-inning games.

West Pittsburgh and the Moose were slated for a game last night at West Pittsburg but Manager Ralph "Blackie" Fundoots called the game off on account of wet grounds. Fans will see two fine ball games Sunday and no doubt the biggest crowd of the year will travel to Lee avenue field.

Bronze vs Universal A. A.

In one of those on-again off-again affairs the Universal A. A. has decided to play the Johnson Bronze team at Marshall field Sunday in a regular scheduled league game. The Universal team yesterday announced a postponement of the Sunday game, but the managers, Peck Houston and Mike Diffley, got together and arranged to play the game.

Last night at Marshall field the Universals folded up to the Bronze 24 to 2 in a postponed game. This gives the Bronze 13 wins and two defeats for the second half to date. Monday the Johnson Bronze will play at Ellwood City at 6 o'clock and next Tuesday at West Pittsburg.

Call Game Off

The scheduled Machinists and P. R. R. game at E. & A. field last night had to be postponed on account of wet grounds.

Fair Or Foul

By LAWTON CARVER
(International News Service Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—Besides making the American League pennant race a four-club scramble, the war has done something else to major league baseball, something strange and perhaps significant. The National League has assumed domination in slugging, as pointed out in this corner sometime ago, and shows no sign of relinquishing this new-found glory.

Earlier in the season some of us figured that before the clubs hit the wire on October 1 there would be an American League resurgence in the powerhouse department. But it positively isn't so. Major leaguers will pay their respects late this month to home run, runs batted in and batting champions wearing the regalia of National League clubs. Where are the good old days when it was 10 to 1 that a Ruth or a Foxx, or a Greenberg would be on the business end of baseball's most powerful bat in behalf of the American League?

Close Batting Race

At this moment there are four National Leaguers — Walker of Brooklyn, Musial and Hopp of St. Louis and Medwick of New York—who are out-hitting the top man in the American League, Nicholson of Chicago is well in front for runs driven in, and he and Ott, of New York, are so far in front of American Leaguers in home runs that it no longer is a contest between the two leagues.

Walker, better known as Dixie, and Musial are in one of the closest races in years for the major league batting title, which Musial won last year with an average of .357. He and Walker both are over .350 at the moment.

By contrast there isn't an American Leaguers as high as .330, Bob Johnson of Boston being the leader with .326.

There never has been an adequate explanation of the unique fact that the American League is a hitting league and the National a haven for pitchers. Baseball players come in all shapes and sizes from all minor league points, and wend their way into either major league through no fine process of selectivity that causes a club to pass up a good looking hitter and go after a good looking pitcher.

National League Leads

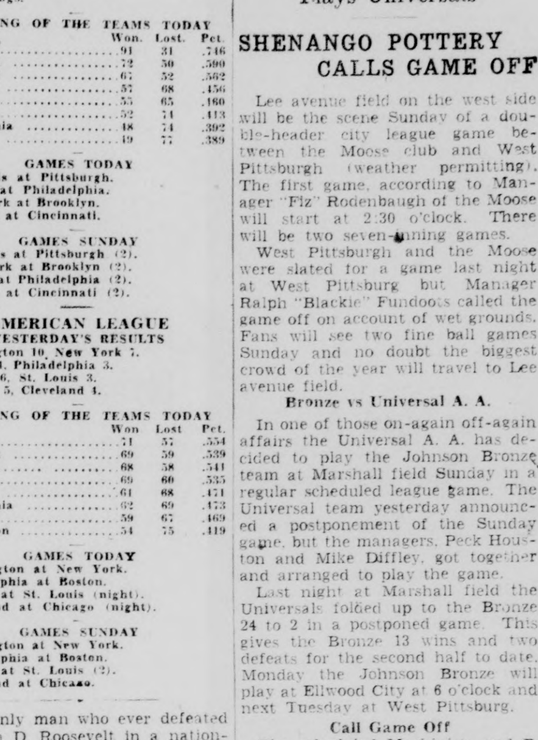

Perhaps the National League's wartime trend toward power will hold over for a time and we are about to see the American League running second in departments it dominated so long.

Perhaps the National will continue to come up with clubs like the Cardinals, too; clubs that can get out in front and clinch the pennant early, instead of engaging in scrambles down to the wire as they used to do when the American Leaguers, most notably the Yanks, were running away with their race.

We may be looking at a Cardinal team that won't be beaten out of the National League pennant for years, and one that at the same time will show the way offensively as well as on the mound.

Ellwood Charity Show Goes Over

Second Annual Dapper Dan Club Vaudeville And Fight Show Draws Around 400

ELLWOOD CITY, Sept. 2.—The second annual Dapper Dan club vaudeville and fight card presented at the Lincoln Field last night drew a crowd of around 400 fans, it was announced today, the crowd being somewhat below expectations, owing to the postponement on Thursday night. The proceeds go to Elwood City charity.

The vaudeville show and music for the occasion by the Ellwood City High band was the first two acts on the night's card, followed by eight boxing bouts. In the main go Foo Yee, "China Clipper" of Youngstown decisioned Phil Reyes of Mexico City in a fast encounter full of punching and clever footwork, in the 122 lb class.

Emil Cannel of New Castle won his fight from Red Mason of Youngstown in the 130 lb class Cannel was out in front all the time and had Mason groggy several times. All of the bouts were good. William McGlinchey was general chairman of the event.

Flower Show At New Wilmington

Eighth Annual Exhibition Of New Wilmington Garden Club Event Of Friday

New Wilmington Garden Club held its eighth annual Flower Show in the United Presbyterian church, Friday. Arrangements were in charge of Mrs. Griffith Williams, president of the club and general chairman for the show. Mrs. L. J. Silman, Miss Mable Stewart, Mrs. Jane Yahn and Mrs. Cornman.

A large display of gladiolis greeted one directly in front of the door and a large sunflower, close to ten feet tall, filled one corner of the room.

Many of the displays were outstanding, especially the group of arrangements with background and the arrangements representing the four seasons of the year.

A very interesting group was the patriotic arrangements of flowers by the different New Wilmington Clubs. Another original display was a garden cart filled to over-flowing with large zinnias of every color. At one table unusual house plants were on sale. The proceeds of the show were to be used for the New Wilmington Branch of the Red Cross.

Judges for the show were Mrs. J. Albert Wilson, Mrs. Harold Ferver and Mrs. Sylvia Sturdevant, members of the New Castle East Side Garden Club.

CAMPFIRE CORNER

By JACK WELCH

CORVUS THE CORSAIR

Ducks unlimited came out with the flat-footed statement as of Aug. 1 that "there will be at least 10 per cent increase in Canadian ducks this year as compared with 1943." Good news for wildfowl hunters, but this column's about old Corvus, the crow, and in that connection I was interested in another paragraph of the same report, which stated that wildfowl losses through crows and magpies this year have been the "heaviest ever."

There are no magpies hereabouts, but I've tried to do my small bit this summer in reducing the number of crows in the vicinity. There are plenty of the big black marauders about. Unfortunately, I have no shotgun with me, so I have to do my shooting with a .22 rifle, and without benefit of crow call. Through careful stalking, however, and study of the crows' local habits, I've laid the foundation for an all-out one-man crow shoot. I'm going to borrow a shotgun, send for a limited allotment of my precious store of shells and my crow call, and I'll improvise a decoy of some sort. Maybe I can collect a cat.

I've already knocked off a dozen or so ebon rascals with the .22. It's real sport despite the mosquitoes swarming about you and the heat that sometimes blankets the atmosphere where dense trees shut off the breeze. The crow's a clever bird, despite his cowardice, and he's hard to stalk.

Once you've shot one, however, you seem to attract attention to yourself and many pals of the deceased will follow you about the woods with raucous caws, remaining at what they believe to be a safe distance if they spy a gun in your hands, or venturing fairly close if they see no firearm. This sort of smartness spelled doom for one of the clan, which I shot with my .22 pistol—quite a feat for me, in view of my sometimes erratic marksmanship.

A Ducks Unlimited ranger, detailing crow depredations, says that "in the case of a pinnated grouse nest or duck nest in short grass the nest is pilfered in short order.

"One crow comes up to the setting bird from the front and starts to torment her. As the mother duck reaches forward to try and drive away the black gangster a second works from the rear, fishing out an egg each time till all are destroyed."

Canadian Border Closed At Windsor

DETROIT, Sept. 2.—(INS)—Canadian military authorities today closed the border at Windsor to service personnel because of the infantile paralysis epidemic in Detroit and Michigan.

At the same time, Dr. John Howie, Windsor, Ont., health officer, appealed to parents in that city to prevent their children from entering the epidemic area.

And in Detroit, 59 new cases of the dread disease were reported this week and an additional 22 were reported elsewhere in Michigan.

Four Thousand Awaiting Trial

Many Celebrities Facing Trial In Paris As German Collaborationists

By HENRY TAYLOR
Reuters Staff Correspondent
(Distributed by International News Service)

PARIS, Sept. 2.—Among the 4,000 persons awaiting trial as collaborators in the Velodrome D'Hiver, famous Paris equivalent of America's Madison Square Garden, are some of the greatest celebrities of the French stage and film.

They include the famed playwright and actor Sacha Guitry, Dita Parlo, girl friend of German propaganda minister Paul Goebbels, and another film star who is a friend of Maurice Chevalier.

I watched Guitry in custody this afternoon. He was elegant in a snappy straw hat and an immaculate lounge suit. He looked much older and was besticulating excitedly with friends. Dita Parlo was with her mother.

There are some 4,000 other persons in the same situation at La Sante prison, Fort Romainville, the University, Frens, and Drancy—awaiting examination on charges of collaborating with the Germans.

Paris did not take long in dealing with those suspected of collaboration. French forces of the interior are still on the hunt and 40 suspects were brought into the Celodrome when I was there.

Hunting Them Down

Despite assurance of the FFI that the suspects were easily rounded up, there stil lare sometimes chases over the rooftops.

I met an 18-year-old youth of the FFI last night who had just caught a Russian known to have been an agent of the Gestapo.

"We found his hiding place," he told me. "He was armed and it was tricky, but three of us trapped him on a roof We know he is responsible for 40 of our friends being imprisoned and, in more than a dozen cases, being shot."

This youth used to be an interpreter for the Germans. It was the only way to keep his family alive, for they had no money to deal in the black market. But he took every chance to steal official papers from the Nazis which then could be filled in to afford safe passage to patriots.

He also sent tips to Maquis of proposed German activites. When Paris was being seized by its own sons and daughters, he stole a German car packed with food and handed everything over to the FFI.

He, himself, then took a tricolor band and a rifle to fight for the city's liberation.

Many of the collaborators know what awaits them. You could see it written on their faces as they awaited examination in several detention prisons like the Velodrome. It was amazing to see 1,000 Franc notes passing between them.

They even had a black market among themselves in the prison. A packet of cigarets brought 200 Francs.

See No Change In Induction Policy

Most Of Draft Calls Will Be For Men Under 26 Through Present Year

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—(INS)—Congress was informed today by the selective service system that the present policy of inducting men under 26 years of age to meet most of the draft quota will probably be continued until the end of the year at least.

Col. Francis V. Keesling, Jr., liaison officer for selective service, in a periodical report to the senate and house military affairs committees stated:

"It is believed that we will get enough men under our present induction and classification policies to meet estimated calls of the armed forces at least until the end of this year. Consequently, if such calls remain constant, our present induction and classification policies can be continued at least until the end of this year.

"Under these policies most of the men being inducted are under 26 years of age, with only a comparative small percentage of calls being filled with men between 28 and 38."

During July, said Keesling, approximately 83 per cent of the inductions were 18 to 26 years of age.

He disclosed that on Aug. 1 approximately 10,384,000 registrants or 46.9 per cent of all regisirants aged 18 through 37 had been inducted into the armed forces, including those subsequently discharged for physical disability or death.

Registrants in class 1-A totaled 1,195,000 on Aug. 1 with 4,384,000 declared unfit for military service. Industrial occupational deferments totaled 4,192,000 with another 1,614,000 deferred in agriculture.

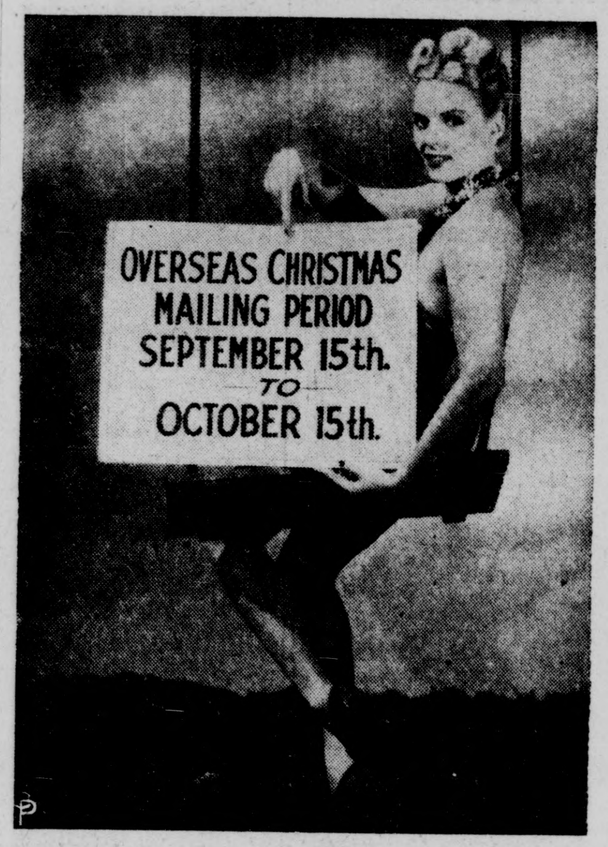

Overseas Openings In Red Cross Ranks

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 2.—(INS)—The Red Cross has a number of overseas openings for men, it was announced recently by J. W. Oliver, chairman of personnel recruitment of the Pittsburgh chapter.

Applications are being taken at Red Cross local headquarters. Those accepted will be sent to national headquarters in Washington for training.

"This is a splendid opportunity for men who want to travel, see action, and work directly with the armed forces," Oliver said. The positions open are for assistant field directors to be attached to units in any theatre of war where they may be needed.

A VERY PLEASANT REMINDER

FILM ACTRESS Angela Greene reminds you by way of a poster that the month from Sept. 15 to Oct. 15 has been set aside by military and post office authorities as the period for mailing Christmas parcels to the Yank doughboys at their overseas destinations. (International)

Returns Home After Six Year Stay In Hospital

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 2.—(INS)—Eight-year-old Elsie Whitehead is home to stay. For more than six years, life for the youngster has centered in wards of children's hospital while medical science fought for her life.

She went into the hospital a baby of 18 months, her throat and stomach seared by lye that she drank in her Lawrenceville home, surgeons didn't give her much chance for life the day she was admitted, but they went to work to do the best they could.

For the first three years of her stay, Elsie was fed through an incision and tube to her stomach. Her throat was almost entirely closed. Even after the three years were up, when she began to swallow food normally, the incision was kept open. Recently she was operated on again—the third time. This time is was the last, for the incision was closed and Elsie has said a thankful farewell to the hospital, the surgeons and nurses who won their fight against death.

HOME CANNED TOMATO JUICE EASY TO MAKE

It isn't necessary to wait until near the end of the tomato season before putting up a few jars or bottles of juice. It takes perfect tomatoes to make high quality juice.

For homemade tomato juice, use soft but ripe tomatoes. Scald, remove skins and stem ends, and cut into pieces. Simmer until softened enough to put through a sieve. Let cool before sieving. This is important because if strained while hot the vitamin C loss will be high.

Strain the juice, bring to a boil, and fill hot clean jars to within a half inch from the top. Add 1 teaspoon of salt to each quart jar, adjust lid, and seal according to the type of closure used. Salt is all that needs to be added for seasoning. Process quart jars 15 minutes and pint jars 10 minutes in the boiling water bath, having the water at least 1 inch over the top of the jars.

If using bottles, leave a half inch head space in each bottle. Process the same as jars.

Cool jars or bottles of tomato juice away from drafts. Stand jars right side up. When cold store in a cool, dark, dry place.

Bocce League Seeks Charter

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 2.—(INS)—The Western Pennsylvania Bocce League obtained a charter in Pittsburgh recently with the hope of putting the game on a par with other nationally known sports.

Attorney Frank J. Zappala told Judge W. Heber Dithrich, who granted the league its charter, bocce is growing in popularity. A favorite Italian outdoor bowling game for years, it has spread rapidly, he said. Young and old alike play the game and one tournament last year drew more than 2,500 fans.

Twenty-one clubs, in three divisions, hold league membership, representing communities in Allegheny, Westmoreland and Washington counties. While each team is limited to four men to play, many teams have as many as 25 on the roster.

Bocce is played on a clay or red dog court from 65 to 80 feet in length.

The Snyder boys were not acquainted with each other's whereabouts, but Kenneth's mother wired to Kenneth at California giving John's address.

DENY REPORTS ON PRESIDENT'S TRIP

Rumor Destroyer Sent 1000 Miles To Recover President's Dog Denied

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—(INS)—House Majority Leader McCormack gave congress a denial Friday from President Roosevelt's chief of staff of "rumors" that a destroyer was sent 1,000 miles to recover the President's dog Fala. He also denied that battleships and cruisers accompanied the president on his recent Hawaiian trip.

McCormack declared that the story told the house yesterday by Rep. Knutson (R) Minn., concerning the White House Scottie was branded by Admiral William D. Leahy as "made of whole cloth."

Knutson relayed the "rumor" that when the presidential party left the Aleutians, Fala was forgotten and that after his absence was discovered in Seattle, a destroyer was sent to "fetch him."

"The dog was never lost," McCormick quoted Leahy as saying. "It was never sent for, and could not have been sent for because it was never lost at any time during the trip."

And he added:

"Admiral Leahy stated I could quote him that there was no foundation to the rumor about battleships or cruisers accompanying the president and that there is no foundation about the rumor on the dog."

Undaunted, Knutson promptly came up with another observation, reporting that he had learned that the trip to Australia and the South Pacific made "not so long ago by a very famous lady" in a bomber had consumed 43,000 gallons of gasoline.

Knutson's reference obviously was to Mrs. Roosevelt although he refrained from using her name. He said that with the American people at that time being "severely rationed on gasoline...It just doesn't sit good."

"Why does the gentlemen try to get out of his position by trying to create another rumor?" demanded McCormack.

Smiling, Knutson told the house: "If there was no foundation for the doggie story, of course I'm sorry."

Special Type Of Valve Oil Helps

ERIE, Pa., Sept. 2.—(INS)—A special type of valve oil which he invented 20 years ago has enabled Frank J. Tate's garage business to weather the war crisis which has forced so many of his fellow garage men to close shop for the duration.

His invention, Tate claims, has helped keep his own car, a 16-year-old model, on the road through 305,000 miles of service.
